

Fourth African International Economic Law Network Biennial Conference

Africa's Participation in International Economic Law in the 21st Century

The African International Economic Law Network (AfIELN) invites the submission of abstracts for the 4th Biennial Conference taking place at Strathmore University, Nairobi, Kenya from 18 to 20 July 2019.

1. Conference Theme

The theme for the 4th AfIELN Biennial Conference is Africa's Participation in International Economic Law in the 21st Century. Historically, while Africa's voice has remained at the margins of International Economic Law (IEL), recent years have seen an emergence of exciting, new scholarship and research on the continent's contributions to, and involvement with IEL. Given the current inauspicious international economic regime, examining Africa's participation is even more critical.

At the continental level, the framework agreement for the African Continental Free Trade (AfCFTA) signed on the 21st of March 2018, by forty-four African Union (AU) countries is among the recent efforts to transform Africa's participation in the global economy. When established, the Agreement aims to create a single market for goods, services and movement of persons in the African continent. The signing of the AfCFTA was coupled by the adoption of an AU common position for negotiations of a new cooperation agreement with the European Union post 2020. This occurred at a time when the United States is also considering maturing its trade relations with Africa upon the expiration of the African Growth and Opportunity Act (AGOA) waiver in 2025.

The AfCFTA Agreement adds to the adoption in 2016 of a Pan-African Investment Code (PAIC), the first continent-wide model investment agreement whose objective is to foster coherence and consistency regarding the rules and principles that govern investment protection, promotion and facilitation on the African continent. Whether the negotiations of the AfCFTA investment chapter will support the trends of the PAIC or will follow another standard approach remains to be seen.

While the signing of these Agreements connotes significant progress in the Continent's participation in global economic governance in the 21st century, however, several questions still remain. Narratives and counter-narratives of what it means to live in a globalized world where trade is free, fair and equitable could influence the challenges that have hitherto slowed down the pace of trade liberalization within the Continent. Other than the internal challenges encountered by trade liberalization in Africa, at the global scene, a rising wave of market protectionism has emerged in the United States and Britain which threatens the present construct of free trade.

The purpose of this conference, therefore, is to bring together scholars and scholarship that highlights original and innovative thinking in IEL as it pertains to the continent. In doing so, the Conference aims not only to encourage collaboration and network that challenges, engages and addresses Africa's marginality in global economic governance but also critical scholarship on the various emerging innovative platforms on the continent.

Therefore, the AfIELN 4th Biennial Conference invites academics, practitioners, and government officials to submit papers that examine the recent crop of African trade, investment and economic partnership agreements as well as the AfCFTA and their impacts on Africa's economic development.

The Conference Committee invites submissions that address Africa's Participation in International Economic Law in the 21st Century in the following areas.

2. Submission Instructions

The Conference Committee welcomes individual and panel proposal submissions from African and Africanist IEL scholars, new voices as well as established scholars whose work relate directly or indirectly to the continent. Submissions should include a research abstract (no more than 400 words) and a short bio to be sent no later than 22 December 2018 to afieln.siel@gmail.com. Papers will be selected based on quality, originality, and their capacity to provoke productive debates. Enquiries can be submitted to afieln.siel@gmail.com.

Furthermore, interested parties working on a common issue or topic not listed among the thematic areas above may propose their own panel by submitting a common proposal for such panel with the following details:

- Proposed topic or issue for the panel
- Names of panel participants and their respective affiliations
- Respective paper titles and abstracts of no more than 400 words
- Contact details of panel head

The Conference Committee plans to announce decisions no later than 28 February 2019. Selected applicants will be expected to submit their complete paper (not exceeding 6000 words) by 20 June 2019.

3. Conference Fees, Costs and Financial Support

Conference fees and associated attendance costs are fairly low. All conference participants and speakers must plan to cover their travel, accommodation and attendance costs.

If funds become available, AfIELN plans to offer limited scholarship and conference registration waiver for graduate students of African origin and scholars that are based on the continent. Applicants are invited to submit a paragraph-long statement indicating if they will need financial support with their abstract. More information on conference registration fee will be available on the conference webpage in due course.

4. Conference Publication

In line with previous AfIELN Conferences, the Conference Committee plans to publish selected articles in a peer-review Journal special issue or edited book volume. More information will also be provided in due course.
